

BANG!

by Mark Halpin

As the misfits and miscreants of Assassins could attest, sometimes when you take your shot, you end up shooting blanks. Fifteen of this puzzle's clues similarly miss the mark, containing missing elements which must be filled into the blanks in order to read the clues correctly.

Answers are to be entered in the concentric rings of the target, in an order to be determined by the solver. All answers in a given ring will run in the same direction, which may be either clockwise or counterclockwise. The clues for each ring are given in alphabetical order of that ring's answers. The positions of the outermost answers, which run counterclockwise, are given. As an aid in placing the answers, within any of the eight sectors delineated in the target by dashed lines, the letters of a given ring segment will contain all but one of the letters from the next segment outward, in some order.

Sometimes one achieves one's aim. Part of a Sondheim lyric celebrating this fact can be found along one axis of the filled grid. The lyric may be completed along the perpendicular axis by accurately firing a single well-chosen letter into the bull's-eye.
